

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to broadcast a political add disguised as a documentay is a clear violation of it's use of the public airwaves. Particularly in this troubled time - with our nation already deeply divided - we need sane, factual broadcasting, not more propaganda. If the company insists on broadcasting this program it should be required by the FCC to prominently and accurately advise it's views that what they are broadcasting is a "paid political add" and just like any other add of this type advise it's audience who is paying for it. The FCC is supposed to be looking after the public interest - at least I THOUGHT that was the idea - and permitting this kind of behavior only underlines the hazzards of the media consolidation that we are seeing day after day.

Thank you
